

Hello,

Alicia & I want to thank you for giving us an opportunity to give you a little insight about our lives, values, and love for one another. My wife Alicia is a wonderfully compassionate woman that is also highly educated with a master's degree. She is a college professor and works in the behavioral science field. Alicia is the oldest of 3 children and very involved in our church, community service, her sorority and many other activities. I know that

Alicia would be the best mother a child could ever have and she would see to it that your baby would experience the best that life has to offer.

My name is Bobby and I am the older of 2 boys. My parents met in college and made sure to raise my brother and myself in a Christian home where education was a priority. We also went on many family vacations on a yearly basis all over the country and I truly feel that helped me grow as a person. I intend to share all of these values and experiences with your baby. I have a bachelor's degree and have been working as a pharmaceutical sales representative for the past 10 years. I also played college football on an athletic scholarship for a major university in the Midwest. I truly love sports and you can rest assured that your baby will be involved in many activities, because I believe that sports help to build character in children. I am also a trustee at our church. I know I can be a great dad to your baby and help him or her reach their full potential.

Alicia & I met 10 years ago and have been very happily married for over 6 years. I really do feel extremely blessed to have found someone as special as Alicia and knowing that we are committed to keeping our marriage strong. This will insure that our future child will have a loving and nurturing home that he or she can come to depend on for their emotional, financial, and spiritual needs. We love to spend time with one another, go out on dates, travel, & spend time with family during the holidays.

We understand how challenging this decision is for you and want to thank you so much for considering us worthy to be included in your adoption plan. We look forward to providing a healthy, happy, and secure environment for our adopted child.
